"NED'S" FACE. WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER

What a picture haunts my sight In the day and dreams by night. A face more radiant far Than the brilliant evening star, Such an one the angels wear-Such a face they welcome there. Let me paint it, then, and see, With my judgment you agree: Laughing face without a frown, Lovely curls of glossy brown, Hazel eyes, whose lustre bright Dims the twinkling stars of night; Nose perfection, pearly teeth, Dainty little chin beneath, Lips like rosebuds, all aglow— Perfect shape of Cupid's bow; Such a vision charms the sight Always laughing, happy, bright; Such a girlish face I see When "Ned" says "Hello!" to me

MONOMANIAC.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER, BY HARRY POMERGY.

He said I loved the woman. I didn't in the sense as understood, and as he inferred, but I thought very highly of her. She was an actress—not a "star, but something of a favorite—a good woman, and struggling for the highest place on the boards which she could reach. And what a struggle it is for a woman! More so, much more, everything considered, than for a man, I think.

Love her as he more than inferred—declared—l truly did not. Not a touch of the "tender passion" had I for her, yet I had a deep, if not tender, regard for her. I don't know that it was not tender in its way. In fact, I think it was. Brothers can have "tender regards" for sister, sister for brother, can't they? Well, there it is. I had a tender regard for her, with never a thought of a closer relationship than then existed. I couldn't have been her husband-unless I had gone out West and invoked certain judicial powers that there obtain—and couldn't have been her "lover," as understood, for that interesting personage must have been her husband-elect, provided she loved him, with favors to come only after marriage. And yet he insisted that I loved the woman. Nonsense! I declared, and disavowed the love in a quietly strenuous way, without strong expletives or excitement. But it did no good. He knew I loved her, and that settled it. I never asked him what business it was of his if I did love her; not that it never occurred to me, but that I didn't trouble myself to ask the question-possibly reasoned that it was none of my business wha business it was to him, perhaps. I don't remember.

Well, now, and very queerly, too, it was none of his business whatever. He didn't love the womandidn't want her at all, was not a relative and hardly a friend—well, he might have been a friend to a certain extent, but she was no great friend of his-s or less intimate acquaintance, and the acquaintanceship she could have dropped without a pang, only there was no particular reason why she should. It was a funny situation, wasn't it? One man protesting against the love of another man for a certain woman which did not exist in that other man, the first man insisting, however, that it did becoming bitter in consequence of that imaginary love, and for no earthly reason, as I knew. You could hardly have called his a dog in the manger attitude, for even though he could have eaten it, he didn't want the hay. All I can say it was funny, queer, strange, anything in that way you like. It had its serious side, however, and he was that.

He was serious, very, when he first accused— the only word I can use, as it was a rightdown serious accusation, as though I were guilty, and responsible to him—me of loving the woman, and became bitter later on and unpleasant to meet. Had he been any way violent-for that matter had I-we two would have furnished forth many a "striking scene"—I mean this literally, as well as in the sense as understood—for the delectation of an "admiring public," for the "a. p." dearly loves a "scene," par ticularly of the striking variety, and will go out of its way and wait long to witness one. But he was a thoroughbred gentleman, notwithstanding his strange hallucination regarding myself, and all our meetings, which were not few, for, somehow, he seemed to be continually on my trail, were very quiet, unobservable affairs, though extremely unpleasant to me, as I allowed myself to be too much affected by his bitterness. I should have laughed at him, as I did over the situation at parting; but some took the laugh all out of me, with the intensity of his bitterness. He never threatened me with equences dire, but he insisted and commanded, I may say, always terminating with "If you don'." leaving me to infer that consequences would follow if I didn't. These were threats, I suppose, of the mental reservation order, and, perhaps, meaning more than threats openly expressed, as threatened men indubitably live long. But these mentally reserved threats didn't worry me; the mistake I made was in allowing myself to be annoyed by him. ought to have knocked him down, perhaps. I more than once thought it, but the thought that the name of my feminine friend might be dragged before a floating public prevented a knock down, which might have ended the annoyance for all time. I believe now that it would have had that effect.

These tetes a tete generally occurred at one or the other of two clubs of which I was a member, he be ing a member of these and others, and one morning, after one of these quietly stormy meetings, unbosomed myself to a friend, remarking at the close of the unbosoming that I believed my persecutor was "off his nut:" that he was a monomanaic, to say the least. The sympathy I got was a smile; one of those smiles-you know them very well-that always "wreath the lips" of people, particularly "friends," when one protests a purely platonic attachment for one of the opposite sex—as if such attachments could never be—and that smile ended the confidence with him and with all others, if ever I should have felt myself confidentially inclined. I knew very well what my friend thought, but I didn't When the sailing hour arrived, without the knew very well what my friend thought, but I didn't question him nor seek to strengthen my position by further protestations. I dropped the subject and took up another. Why should I have continued to pro-test above board considerations? He knew me, and he knew that the woman was above suspicion; but he had that smile for me. The fact of the matter is, man does not believe man, nor woman woman, nor the one the other, when it comes to matters between the two sexes. A man will take your word for any-thing under the sun, except it appertains to a woman. Is it strange, or isn't it? No; man was built that way. Only that and nothing more.

Well, this funny situation, as I always called it to myself, was maintained for months. But all at once a change came over the spirit of my persecutor's dream, for dream it was, and nothing else.

way, in the way of time extension, I said, for the invited ones to put in their appearance, and I suggested half an hour, which was agreed to, with the understanding that not a minute longer would be allowed. Slowly as old time traveled that half hour, the guests were slower in getting to the dock, and were not in sight at 10.30. A moment later and the anchor was atrip, the yacht swinging 'round and heading for the bay, myself the owner's only guest.

The yacht was about sixty feet in length, of fine model and appearance, and called the Iris. I had often seen, but never before been aboard of her. She was a staunch little craft, and her owner be-lieved, or pretended to believe, that she was equal to an Atlantic voyage, and could make Queenstown in lowed by the coming of a full moon, I didn't regret our tarry at the city of the Summer girl, but rather that our course was due east, which rather sur prised me, I asked my host, who, let me say, had been all day one of the most gentlemanly, if not genial, of hosts, if he intended to run off soundings. as, if that were his intention I would like the loan of a yawl to make my way to land. Instantly his manner changed. His face became hard, and that bit ter expression that I used to notice came to it. In a quiet but firm tone, he replied that he most as suredly intended to run off soundings, as he was bound for Queenstown. I looked him in the eye for

This change was not from bitter to sweet, and at | ten days, stating, as I had more than once heard | signs of madness, discovering none that were patent once. Unaccountably he dropped the matter, as, unaccountably he had taken it up; that was all. It was enough, to be sure, but it wasn't offensive, you know. He became toward me as he had been before his strange self appointed guardianship of the woman in quartion—a gentleman whose society, if not yearned for, was agreeable enough, as gentle met as often as before the change but not a word from either of us would have let you into the secret, and never so attentive a listener. It puzzled me for a time, but I finally concluded that he was a man of "fits and starts" hallucinatory, and

One day, weeks after the change on his part, we run up against one another by accident, apparently —I knew before the end of that day that there was nothing accidental in the meeting; that he was on my trail in search of me—and, after a few common-places, he said to me that he was going to take a select few of his friends down the bay the next morning, and invited me along with as much cordi ality as he ever exhibited-a quiet invitation, you know, given to be accepted, and not to be respect fully declined or forgotien. The invitation did not surprise me in the least, in view of our changed re-lations—none would have declined it who could have accepted-and I accepted it on the spot, and at ten minutes to 10 o'clock the next morning was on the deck of his steam yacht, anchored in the t River, off Twenty-third Street. Ten o'clock was the hour of starting, but the party I was to meet was him, that he would have no fear of making the at-tempt to cross the always more or less boisterous ocean. There may have been times when the little steamer could have crossed, perhaps, and in the time as stated; but I had never seen the man who would have volunteered to accompany the owner on the super extra hazardous trip. None had the confidence he had in the sea worthiness of his little craft-nothing strange, as a man believes or pre tends to in his own-while I would have as soon started for Queenstown in a catboat—needs, must, the catboat, I think.

The day was fine, though an easterly breeze had according to sailor men, though landsmen would have thought it lumpy enough in the lower bay. We steamed along off Coney Island and Rockaway, then to the south off Sandy Hook, Seabright and Long ranch, going ashore at the latter place for a couple of hours or more in the afternoon, and had an en joyable enough trip, at least I did, gliding over the waters in any kind of a craft, so she is speedy, being one of my delights. There was nothing of a "good time" aboard, as there might have been had the other invited ones put in an appearance; but there was nothing wanting in the way of solids and fluids and cigars to make one contented and happy. Everything a liberal yacht owner ever furnished his guests was there for the taking or at one's order; so, all in all, if not a boisterously "good time," it was an enjoyable one to me; and my host seemed to enjoy it equally well.

When we left Long Branch the sun was getting well down toward the Highlands and would shortly sink behind them; but as his going would be folto me. Yet if ever a man meant business-meant what he said—he did. Then I took on the noncha lant, remarking that it would be a nice trip, with a fine night for a starter.

"Yes," said he, meaningly, "and the Iris will have a fine run, I doubt not." There was no mistaking the man or his intentions—he was bound for Queenstown in that cockel shell! Was I alarmed? Pray, who wouldn't have been? The prospect was not a pleasant one, for we should be swamped long before sun up, for the sea was already kicking up chops that were anything but promising of safety.

"But why didn't you let me know of this trip, I would gladly have made the voyage with you, said I, earnestly. It wasn't a white lie that I uttered, perhaps, nor yet a very black one-it was to draw him out and away from his mad train of thought, if it was mad. Well, it drew him out, but "I took my own method, and we are off for Queens town, sir.

"But I can't go, sir; it is impossible!" "I don't see how you can help going, sir. You are on my yacht, which is victualed and coaled for fifteen days, with clearance papers for Queensto and we have started on the voyage.

Again I looked him in the eye. He may have been as "mad as a March hare," but he looked no different to me than he used to look, when he pre sumed to supervise my actions in one certain direc

"You didn't invite anyone else aboard?" said I, in a moment, as the thought occurred to me.

"Then it was a trap for me, eh?"
"If you look at it in that light."
"What other light is there ——"

"There comes the moon," he broke in, which grim

"I'll be d-d if I go to sea in this cockle shell !" I exclaimed. "Put her about, helmsman. This madman would run for Queenstown." But the yacht kept to her course, and the sea was getting uglier every moment.

"As I remarked before, I don't see how you can help going to sea in her," said my old time cutor, revivified after an interval of hypocrisy

At this instant the skipper came aft, and I appealed to him. He said gruffly that the yacht had cleared for Queenstown, but that the owner would shortly see that the voyage was impracticable.

"Then you do not mean to run for that port, make or break?" said I, wishing to learn if he would obey orders if he broke owners, for I knew the owner had certainly given orders and might give more.

"I am going to satisfy the owner that his craft is not fit for ocean voyages," was the skipper's reply, which satisfied me, for I saw that the man was not a foolbardy one, and would refuse to obey orders at the supreme moment.

"Voyages-I intend to make only this voyage," said the owner, and no more was said by either of us. The yacht pitched and rolled and shipped water at a great rate, and I didn't believe she could live an hour longer in the growing sea. It was only about half an hour, when the skipper asked the owner if he wasn't satisfied that the yacht couldn't proceed on her voyage.
"No," was the cool reply. "Why, she rides like an egg shell, and will all the way across."

"She'll ride like an egg shell for ten minutes more, perhaps, and then go down a broken egg to Davy Jones' Locker," replied the skipper, ringing to slow her and ordering the yacht about. Then the hitherto restrained madness in the owner broke loose. On the instant he became a raving maniac With a revolver in each hand, standing braced against the cabin entrance, he yelled out to the "Hell and furies! how dare you, sir, order the hip about? About with her again, or by God ship about? About with her again, or by God l'il —." A tremendous plunge and roll of the yacht, and he plunged backwards into the cabin, the door of which was closed and secured at once, he thus in turn becoming the trapped party. That he wasn't injured he proved to us by shooting the door full of holes, within five minutes.

The yacht got back to town in due time and all right, and the owner was given over to the police, from whose hands he eventually passed to an in-sane asylum, where he remained for a year, when he came forth cured. And now comes the queer part of this story—his cure came about almost as sud-denly as his raving madness that night. A year and a few days from that day the woman in question was married. He was told of it, and in twentyfour hours was a free sane man!

We have met a thousand times since, but no word is ever mentioned of the woman or that yachting trip.

If he owned a yacht now, I don't know but I should go sailing with him if he invited me. Queer case, wasn't it? Perhaps psychologists can explain it, but it is too much for me.

LILLIAN DURELL.

Lillian Durell was born at Boston, Mass., and is twenty-three years of age. She received her mu-sical and dramatic education in her native city, and her first appearance was in "Patience," since which time she has appeared with Atkinson's Jollities, with which company she also went to Europe. This company, by the way, included Frank Daniels and Jennie Yeamans, now stars. On her return to America Miss Durell starred in a musical absurdity, "Aphrodite," for almost two seasons, meeting with much success. It was in the title role in this work that her splendid voice and uncommon histrionic abilities became so manifest as to suggest a higher plane of development. She accordingly withdrew rom public life, and devoted her entire ti several years to persistent study for grand opera. Her studies were directed by Clara Munger. Her debut was in the role of "Mignon," at the Bowdoin Square Theatre, Boston, in May last, creating a gennine sensation among the critics and m people of that city. Miss Durell is extremely slendred and ten pounds, and of extreme sensitive organization. She has a voice of beautiful quality, of great compass and remarkable evenness through its whole range. Her intonation is pure, and she sings with genuine artistic impulse. Her trill is close and free, her colorature is smooth and fluent, and her natural gifts for singing are of a high order. Her extreme high notes are clear and sweet, and the beauty and purity of her G in altissimo is almost phenomenal. Arrangements are pending through which she may appear in grand opera, in this city, during the coming season. She is in private life the wife of Manager Charles F. Atkinson, of the Bowdoin Square Theatre, Boston.

Stuttered Better.

Wit seems often to be the compensating quality to those who have been afflicted by nature with impediment of speech. A New York man, meeting for the first time in some years a stuttering class

"Why, Morrow, you do not seem to stutter as badly as you used to."

"N-nun-no," returned the stutterer. "I h-huhhave h-huh-had so mum-much practice that I fur-find it v-vuv-very easy t-tut-to stut-stammer now. E-easier thuthan spupeaking stut-tut-traight."—

"Don't you think, Mr. Cahokia," asked the young "Don'r you think, Mr. Cahokia," asked the young lady from Boston, as she laid down the photograph album, and looked dreamily at the stalwart figure of one of the waitzers in the next room, "that Mr. Robust has a splendid physique?" "Y-yes," answered the young man from St. Louis, somewhat vaguely; "but a fellow like him, with three hundred and sixty acres of good corn land, Miss Howjames, can afford anything he wants, you know."

Col. Foster furni-hes us the following excerpt from The Funaran Star and Herald of June 23: "The Correo Nactonal, of Boyata, publishes a notice to the Nelson Family, who were in Boyata some time since with a circus company (and who are well known on the Isthmus), or to any one who may know their whereabouts, that Don Ramon Rey Lucero, residing in Chill, desires to confer with that family concerning an important inheritance. The address of Senor Lucero is Valparavso, Chili, in care of the Consulate of Spain or England."

The following from W. C. Coup is self explanatory. It refers to a paragraph in last week's Clitters, in which it was stated that he was agent for McDonald's Tent Cent Circus: "Last season, being engaged with my Rolling Palaces, I let Mr. McDonald have the use of the educated horses at Chicago. This year I persuaded the owner to sell them to him. I then arranged with him to use my mame, it being understood that the show should go on the road. For the use of my name and my superintending his route, my contract calls for a share of the receipts. I am not reduced to an agent for a ten cent circus yet, since I have frequently refused big sums for the use of my name, all of which I refused for reasons of my own."

The Late Dr. James L. Thayer.

The death of this veteran circus proprietor and performer occurred at Chicago, Ill., June 30. He passed away at his home, No. 382 East Thirty-ninth Street, of heart disease, from which he had been a sufferer about two years. He leaves a wife and four children—Mrs. Sam MacFlinn, Mrs. Cash. Hix son, Mamie Thayer and James L. Thayer Jr. Dr. Thayer was born at Waddington, St. Lawrence Co., N. Y., May 20, 1830. At the age of seven he emi-grated with his parents to Milwaukee, Wis., where his father became a man of some prominence, being appointed by President Van Buren a State Commis-sioner to locate the State capital. The Doctor lost his mother in 1840, and his father died in the Spring sioner to locate the State capital. The Doctor lost his mother in 1840, and i.is father died in the Spring of 1842, after which he was thrown on his own resources. In 1846 he traveled with Poter's Circus as chandelier man, whale or lard oil being the Illuminator at that time. The Doctor learned the trade of a tinsmith during the following Winter. Next we find him in the West, driving stage for Frink & Walker, at a salary of $12 a month. He joined. Mable Bros?. Circus at Bardstown, Ill., as band wagon driver, in 1840. Among the company were Harry Buckley, driver; Sol. Lipman, clown; Johnny Goodspeed and his trick dogs, and Mary Ann Wells, equestrienne. In 1840 and 1850 he drove stage for Zimmerman & Green between Vincennes and Terre Haute, Ind. In 1851 he started a tinshop on his own account at Clinton, Ind. In the Spring of 1852, tred of tin and tinkering, he joined Johnson & May's Circus as band wagon driver. Harry Gaul, a musician of repute, was leader of the band. In 1853 he drove band wagon for Welch's Hippodrome, leaving that show at Columbus, 0. to accept the position of superintendent of the Pitisburg and Allegheny Transfer Company. We next find him occupying the position of master of horse for Levi J. North. In the Spring of 1855 he joined Dan Rice's Great Show at Schenectady, N. Y., as boss hostier and driver of twenty horses, and also appeared in the ring in a test of strength, pulling against a pair of horses at each performance. This position he held until the Fall of 1857, when at Dundas, Canada, with the same show, he made his debut as clown. In the Winter of 1857 as paulding & Rocers starred Dr. Thayer as leading jester through the large cities of the South on board the Floating Palace, and also at the Academy of Music, New Orieans. The season of 1858 the doctor was engaged to personate Dan Rice as clown in Rice's Show, which was accomplished so successfully that few were aware of the dual character. In 1859-80 he was leading clown with Van Amburgh & Co. April 3 he married Helen Martin, the oldes of 1842, after which he was thrown on his own re-sources. In 1846 he traveled with Potter's Circus as and was attended by a large number of professional people and old time friends.

RINGLING NOTES.—At the great lake ports, Duluth, West Superior and Ashland, we did a banner business, the crowds being packed so close that ticket sellers could hardly get over the seats. At Duluth, Ed. Reed, a new animal man, at the request of a woman visitor to stir up the wild animals, incantiously thrust his right hand in the cage of a big male African lion. As quick as lightning the lion clawed his arm and grabbed it in his teeth. Despite the use of sharp irons and bars, the blood maddened lion retained his hold, and the victim had to be pulled away by main force, leaving part of his arm in the furious beast's mouth. The limb was horribly mangled, stripped of fiesh and bared to the bone. Reed fainted with pain, but was driven at once to St. Mary's Hospital, where his arm was amputated at the shoulder. The lion, wild from lapping human blood, made fierce attempts to escape from his cage. Mr. Reed very sadly admitted having acted against orders, and his fate is remindful that those Bible times have not come when the lion lies down with the lamb and "shall eat straw like an ox." Several pickpockets were arrested at Ashland and West Superior and at Anligo. Charley Ringling served papers on three, who, at last accounts, were singing Pastor's old song: "Turnkey, Sweet Turnkey, Set the Beautiful Gates Ajar." When crooks and fakirs try to trail this show "Old Cap." Collier, the detective, swoops down upon them like a thousand of brick. Our sideshow is doing a most phenomenal business. Alf. T. Ringling keeps the pot boiling there, and his able first lieutenant is brim full of information about "that long line of banners" and "these strange and curious people." When he gets the rusties worked up with his voluble eloquence three men are kept busy handing out the tickets.

Matters at the Central Theatre, Jersey City, N. J., are not as pleasant as they might be, it is said, and performers are reported to have had more or less trouble in securing their pay on the closing nights of each week. Minnle Kerwin was the latest victim. Upon meeting Manager J. Newman of the house at one of the agencies July 1, she demanded her money, and, after an heated argument, anger got the best of her discretion, and she landed two;tunning blows on the manager's opticts as a receipt in full. Mr. Newman hastened for an arrest warrant, and Miss Kerwin retired to her home. There is a rumor that the house will change hands this week.

George F. Browne died in this city May 31, 1885. He made his first appearance on the stage about Dec. 7, 1853, at the Tremont, Boston, playing Franco in the opera of "Guy Mannering," with Mr. and Mrs. Wood's English Opera Co. His first appearance in this city as an equestrian star occurred Oct. 9, 1848, at the Bowery Theatre, when he played Dick Turpin in "Rookwood." As an equestrian actor he continued to travel until 1850; then he acted as stage manager of various theatres at Philadelphia, St. Louis and Rochester, N. Y., and afterwards he resumed his legitimate work on the boards, playing leads in a wide range of farces and comedies. This took him up to Nov. 24, 1860, when he was engaged to play The Remorseless Tyrant in a burlesque of took him up to Nov. 24, 1880, when he was engaged to play The Remorseless Tyrant in a burlesque of that name, produced incidental to the spectacle of "The Seven Sisters" at Laurs Keene's (Olympic) Theatre, this city. In the same burlesque his wife (Louise Pray, sister to Mrs. Barney Williams) supported him. For the following season (1841-2) he was engaged for the stock at Wallack's Theatre (now the Star), and there he first appeared Sept. 26, 1861, as Griboulard in Tom Taylor's "The New President." At Wallack's he remained, playing second comedy roles, until 1878, when he refired from the stage to devote his entire attention to his restaurant ventures, which he had intitated with "The Green Room," a chop house purchased by him when he first joined the Wallack Co. in 1861. This (as Sharpe in "Money") was his last appearance on the stage. "A Celebrated Case" was presented Oct. 15. The cast:

The Duke's Motto' was acted until Nov. 10, when James O'Neill appeared in "Monte Cristo." As to his appearing in this piece. Mr. O'Neili teils the following story: He was traveling about with the play, "An American King." In some cities it made money, and in others it was played to empty benches. He remembered his success in "Monte Christo" when he was leading man at Hooley's Chicago stock company years are, and he put it in rehearsal, intending to produce it. John Stetson asked him to come on to New York and play in "The corsican Brothers." He refused this, and was then asked to play in "Monte Cristo." He replied that he was already rehearsing it, and Stetson claimed to be the owner of the only authorized version—Fechter's. O'Neili had engaged the members of his company for a certain number of weeks, and before he would listen to Stetson's offer of $350 per week ne insisted that these contracts should be carried out. Stetson agreed to place the people in the minor parts of the New York cast. Well, "Monte Cristo" was produced and kept on in New York for a run of seven weeks. It was not a big success. Mr. Stetson insisted upon a ballet being introduced, and his idea of a ballet ran to avoirdupols. He came out about even on the New York run. He did not have much faith in the play, but he decided to try it on the road. Mr. O'Nell was to receive $350 per week and one-half the profits. His first act was to cut out the ballet. The brief tour netted $12,000, and $6,000 of this was cleared at the memorable run of the plece at the Grand Opera House here. Mr. Stetson was surprised.

O'Nelli bought "Monte Cristo" of Stetson for $2,000. He thought it was cheap at that price, and Stetson thought he had been well paid for what he considered a worn out attraction. When Mary Anderson made her first visit to London, Manager Abbey arranged with Stetson for her tour through this country on her return. Stetson was to secure the leading man. He asked O'Nell' if he would accept the engagement, and O'Neill asked for the terms. Stetson cabled Abbey asking if O'Neill would do, and the answer came back: "The man of all men—make your own terms with him." After a long talk Stetson forered O'Neil, for a tour of thirty-five weeks, $20,000, to be deposited for him in any bank he might name, also all his wardrobe, from shoes to wigs. The actor said he would stick to "Monte Cristo." Stetson told O'Neill that he was a fool to refuse such a magnificent certainty with Anderson. "Your play has had its day. You've cheapened it in Boston by playing it at the Howard Athenseum, and I wouldn't give you a date for it at the Globe." O'Neill said he would take his chances. He did get a date at the Globe, and played to $6,500 on the week. Toward the close of the engagement Stetson entered the actor's dressing room, took of his hat to him, and told him that he was right—that he would make $40,000 out of "Monte Cristo" that year. "No I will not," responded O'Neil," but I will make $30,000," and he did clear $32,0 will make $30,000," and he did clear $32,000 on the season.

The production of Dumas' novel in a dramatic form has resulted in either "a scene" or a flasco On the first occasion—at the Drury Lane Theatre, London, in 1848, when the company of the Theatre Historique, Paris, attempted to play a version—a terrible scene ensued, benches were torn up, etc., and the audience became nothing more or less than a howling mob of people, infuriated by this intrusion of Gallic players, considering that the presence of the French Co. upon the boards of the historic theatre was a degradation more fatal than its immediately preceding condition—that of a hippodrome and concert room. The company returned to Paris unheard and insuited. One of the chief objections to the play was its inordinate length, the representation requiring two evenings. Upon the first night the troubles and sufferings of Edmund Dantes were exhibited; on the second right was shown the consummate vengeance taken by him in the character of Monte Cristo.

hight was shown the consuminate regions to by him in the charater of Monte Cristo.

A lapse of twenty years took place before "Monte Cristo" was again produced, this time at the Adelphi Theatre, London. Its reception was hissing and hooting, and the verdict was a decided one. A strong cast could not save it—Fechter as Dantes, Websier as Nortier, Carlotta Leclercq as Mercedes, Mr. S. Mellon as Albert, Arthur Stirling as Fernand, George Belmore as Caderousse. It was voted as being feebly written and poorly constructed.

A young man and woman registered at the Car rollton Hotel, Baltimore, June 21, as F. St. Cloud and wife, of New York. They remained in their room most of the time. On 29, the chief clerk room most of the time. On 29, the chief clerk thought it was time to send them their bill. Not receiving any reply to his knock, the door was forced open and the woman found lying dead on the floor and the man stretched lifeless upon the bed. On the bureau were several vials labelled "polson," one of which had contained laudanum. The woman's clothing was scattered about the room. The Coroner declined to hold an inquest, being satisfied the couple had died by their own hands. On the woman's hand were two rings, one of which was inscribed: "From Mamma to Irene." On the fly leaf of a book found in the room was written: "Irene M. Story, Jan. 22, 1891, Locust Point." Mr. St. Cloud married the woman at Baltimore some time ago, and until recently they had lived in New York. He was an Englishman, and among his effects is a letter of discharge from the Grenadier Guards of England, dated July 25, 1890. He is said to have once played in "Michael Strogoff" at the Union Square, this city.

— S. B. Ricaby, agent with the "Little Trixie" Co., is Summering at Platteville, Wis.

— Warren B. Emerson has signed for light comedy roles with the Max Freeman Comedy Co.

— The "Mrs. Casey's Mishapp" Co. closed a brief season June 17. Ed. Chrissie is now preparing for an opening early in August with "The Kid."

— Robert Downing will add two new plays to his repertory next season. "Cross and Crown" is of an historical nature and said to be intensely dramatic, while "The Huron" is a romantic play verging on comedy. Mr. Downing will undertake a role in "The Huron" different from anything yet played by him.

— Joseph Jefferson and Lawrence Hutton were among those who received the honorary degree of Master of Arts from Yale College, at the commencement exercises, June 29.

— A permit was taken out June 28, for interior and exterior alterations to the Chestnut Street Theatre, Philadelphia. The proscenium wall, it is stated, is to be extended five feet above the roof; a new asbestos curtain, to be worked by hydraulic power, is to be introduced, and the ticket office is to be placed in the centre of the front of the building. The stairways will run into the street on either side of the theatre. There will be an entirely new vestibule of pretty design, with fancy cut glass, and numerous advantageous changes will be made in the balcony. Everything will be done to make the theatre cosy as well as safe. The alterations will cost about $10,000, and are to be finished by Aug. 20.

— The trustees of Memorial Opera House, at Mansfield, O., have engaged Ed. R. Endly as manager, to have full charge of the Opera Hoase, attend to all correspondence and to do the booking. All bookings prior to this arrangement will stand. Mr. Endly has been a dramatic correspondent for a number of years.

— J. G. Stevens, occalist, has been meeting with succass during an European tour with the songs, "The Smuggler" and "The Maddean." The latter was composed by the late C. A. White, of Booton.

— Emma Sardou and Raiph Bell played the stellar parts in "Braving the World" at Chicago during a recent week. Mr. Bell has just closed a season of forty-three weeks with Lillian Lewi' Co.

— Joseph A Ott was married June 29 to Florence Wood, a daughter of Irving Wood, of Wells, Vt., at the residence of the bride's unole, William H. Wood, at Red Bank, N. J.

— Preston Kendall closed with the Spooner Comedy Co., June 18, at Burlington, Ia., and is now resting at Chicago. He will play juvenile parts with Annie Mitchell next season.

— May Hillyer has gone to Canada for her vacation. Next season ahe will be with Rosina Vokes.

— A bill is to be presented at the next session of the New York Legislature for the purpose of protecting actors against managers who engage them under false representations of substantial financial backing, and leave them stranded in some distant part of the country, without pay and without means of getting back to New York. Ex-Judge A. J. Dittenhoefer is framing the law, and prominent actors and managers are interested in promoting its passage. The difficulties in forming the proposed law have been to define and specify the offense, and to bring it into some category of violations of statute which is subject to extradition. It is not intended to implicate such managers as start out with small capital but honest intentions and representations, and then fail, but only such as fraudinently induce actors to join their companies by making them believe that they have means of conducting a successful season or of meeting losses.

— Adelaide Fliz Ailen, formerly playing leads with Daniel Bandmann, has been engaged to support Clay Clement next season. The others of this company are Kara Kerwin, Effe Cutler, Edith Talbot, Stephen Wright, William H. Leyden, L. F. Rand, Bertram Hood, W. J. Sturgeon, Conrad Cantzen, Arthur Billings, H. A. Nayler, W. H. Storm, Lillian T. Geiger and Frank A. Friend, with George Smith business manager. Mr. Clement left for Chicago June 28, and will spend a month fishing in Wisconsin. The season of the company will be made mainly in the South and West. An engagement of two weeks will be played at Chicago, and several Eastern citles, among them New York, will be wisted late in the season.

— James A. Relly has completed arrangements to be under James E. Orr's direction next season. Mr. Orr is a member of the well known firm of Williams & Orr, of Pittsburg. Mr. Reilly will produce his new comedy, "A German Soldier," written for him by Harry W. Emmett. He will sing six new songs in it, composed by Will Rossiter, of Chicago. Two sets of scenery will be carried, and there will be something in the election excitement.

Peak's Island, Portland Harbor, Me., is coming rapidly to the front as a Summer resort, mainly in consequence of the advertising of its comforts by the various professionals who have had brief engagements during past Summer seasons. There is quite a gathering there already, and next week brings an addition—Bartley McCullium, who is a native of Portland, and who is known during the Summer season under his family cognomen. He summer season under his family cognomen. He safor several seasons managed a legitimate theatre at low rates of admission, at the Pavilion, and many noted professionals are pleased to accept engagements, because of the extra advantages accompanying the season. His present company embraces James Horne, W. F. Canfield, E. J. Morgan, Harry J. Pielding, P. J. McCallum, Horace Newman, Charles Lonsgan, Florence Hamilton, Louise Boswell, Adsistafield, Maggie Walker and Edith Pollock. Charles B. Hawkins, late of "The Country Circus," is also engaged, and next week will add Emma Pollock, Evelyn Pollock and Ads Lewis, of Edward Harrigan's Co. Fred Murray was engaged as leading man, but, through some misunderstanding, left suddenly, and Mr. McCullom replaced him with James Horne, who was obliged to read the part on the opening night, June 27, in consequence of being mable to commit it to memory in time. Edward P. Sullvan arrived 27, and has taken a cottage for the Summer. He will not act, but occupy his time in studying his part in "The Runaway Wife" for next season, in which he will support Louise Aydelle. Clarence Arper and wife, Lorene Atwood, have also secured accommodations, and T. C. Howard is at the Mineral Syring House. Manager Foas, of "Old Jed Prouty," is at his old quarters, and lds Mortimer has opened her cottage. June 29, signed an order requiring her to show cause why she should not be punished for coatempt.

CLOSED.—The closing of Proctor's Twenty-third Stre t, night of July 2, leaves very few open houses in the metropoils. Palmer's will shut its doors 0, and then the town will experience the quietest Summer amusement term in many years. The theatres dark this week are: Harrigan's, Daly's, the Amberg, Lyceum, Standard, Star, Niblo's, Academy, Fourteenth Street, Proctor's, Union Square, Bijou, Herrmann's, Grand Opera House, People's, Windsor, H. R. Jacobs', Columbus, Harlem Opera House, Harriem Theatre, Harlem Olympic, Metropolitan, New Park, Broadway, Miner's Pifth Avenue, Doris' Museum, Huber's Museum, and the Grand Museum.

"A TRIP TO CHINATOWN'! Termains on the boards at Hoyt's Madison Square. Its triumph defies the weather, and is a notable one in overy respect.

"JUPITER' is in its last week at Palmer's. The Summer heat and general duliness have been too much for this house, and the Digby Bell Co., therefore, will close after the performance July 9.

THE fifth concert and Summer night's festival of the German Odd Fellows' Homace Wall against Harry Lacy, for salary alleged to be due him, was tried June 25, and was won by Mr. Lacy.

CARVER B. CLINE AND MILDERD GALE were married June 30, at the residence of the Rev. W. C. Willing, on Twenty fourth Street. They will make their home at London Terrace. Mr. Cline, who is the press agent of Koster & Bial, is well known, not only in New York, but throughout the country, having been connected with various important theatrical enterprises.

THE MANHATTAN BEACH musical season opened July 2, with F. 8. Gilmore and his band, and these soloists: Camille D'Arville, Miss Finlayson, Eugene Cowles and Mr. Dickerman. On 3 and 4 lda Klein, Sig. Clodio, Miss Beccard and the Swedish Sextet appeared.

ELISABETH MARBURY has begun suit against Proctor & Turner for breach of contract. In January last Proctor & Turner decided to change the policy of their Twenty-third Street Theatre, and received a croposition from Miss Marbury to produce an American adaptation from the French of Fabrice Carre and Emile Blavet. In case the adaptation was not produced by May 1, Proctor & Turner, according to their contract with the French authors, were to pay a forfeit of $500. The date came around, but the $500 failed to materialize, so Miss Marbury asserts; hence her suit.

Koster & Bial's Hall.—An excellent programme is in voyue this week. It includes the French dance duettists, Mons. Dufour and Mile. Harl y, in an original version of the "Fa-Fa-Fa Boom-de-ay" dance, in which they have created something of a sensation. The 'Dance Militaire' is now given with very strique tableaux and chorus effects, and the "Parisian Folly Dance" is kept on as a special feature. The balance of the bill includes the almost indescribable Brothers Borani, acrobats; Satsums, Japanese juggler: Samuel Dearin, in his unique musical act; reappearance of Dagmar and E Celle, duettists and character change performers, and the burlesque "Pocahontas," the music of which has become very popular. On Monday, July II, another European novelty will be seen for the first time, when Nada Reyval, announced as the "Chanteuse Electrique," from Les Ambassadeurs, Paris, will make her debut in America. She was originally billed to appear as a holiday feature on the Fourth, but, through an unavoidable delay, she failed to catch the French steamer at Hayre in time. Her act is said to be highly sensational.

Worth's Museum.—Manager Worth's non-closing venture bids fair to become an assured fact, as business comes up to expectations, with good prospects for a continuation of the same good result during the Summer months. There is certainly nothing that could be added tending to the comforts of the visitors. The best methods of ventilation are employed, while the electric f scene of "Way Down South" concluded the show in great shape.

THE third annual midsummer night's festival, given under the management of Geo. F. Hopper, Eddle Weeks and Burt Fearson, all of whom are old attaches of Miner's Eighth Avenue Theatre, occurred night of June 30 at the Atlantic Casino. The elements deprived very many of the friends of the projectors from participating in the festivities, still the affair was numerously attended, and an enjoyable night resulted. Manager Fred Wisson, Police Captain Devery and ex-Aldermen Barker and Terrell were among the guests.

MINER'S EIGHTH AVENUE THEATRE.—The commonwealth plan of dividing the receipts after the rent of the house and other expenses are deducted from the first money taken in, continues in vogue here with fair success. The people this week are: Kenyon, the Gilmores, Joe Hardman, the Sheerans, Emma Lee, A. E. Burton, Ripley and Risbee, Chas. Heywood, the Paynes and Sig. Weilini.

Thos. Canary, H. C. Miner's partner in the Eighth Avenue Theatre, sailed for Europe July 2. Mrs. Canary accompanied him.

Tony Pastor's Theatre,—With weather right from a perfect mould, it was a fine holiday crowd that thronged this house afternoon and evening of July 4. Business Manager Sanderson vied with Local Forecast Official Dunn in doing his best. The programme was of superfine quality. It was headed by that merry, acrobatic quartet of fun makers, known far and wide as the Big Four, and composed of Smith, Waldron, Cronin and Martin. Their welcome was cyclonic. They hand't been seen at this house for two seasons or more, yet they found their friends as loyal in spirit and thick in numbers as ever. Another favorite who received a particularly hearly greeting was Evic Steison, a consely and clever dislectician, who gave capital imitations of people one may meet on Broadway and the Bowery. Other entertainers who helped to make things jolly and agreeable were little Bonnie Thornton, topical vocalist, whose engagement is to last a whole year, by the way: Baseo and Roberts, midair comedians; Binns and Burns, in a neat and artistic musical act; the Glenroy Bros, exemplifiers of boxing; Josie Gregory, character singer and dancer; Daly and De Vere, a clever sketch team, and Murray and Alden, all 'round fun makers. Manager Pastor sends word from England that he is enjoying himself immensely, and is keeping his weather eyo open for good things in the vaudeville line.

That bound our hearts. Stop thinking! The curtain must rise. Another act is over; the loving scene is done.

Another act is over; the loving scene is uone.

None guessed my silent struggle or the battle won;

How I sang, nor showed the soul pangs through the smiling eyes.

What will happen next act?—The curtain must rise.

Swells the tuneful violin to ecstatic time,

Strains to link fond hearts together with their blissful rhyme; Now they thrill with piercing anguish, farewells, part-

Tis over: My secret is locked. None shall know the breaking heart, How in the meeting glance my senses rocked, like the wave that clashes to part—
Parts but to meet again, and again asunder files,
Would to escape lorever! but—The curtain must rise.

The curtain's down; the actress has gained the world's applause;

The dressing room floor is strewn with laces and ribbons and gauze.
What figure is down in the midst near the door, with a glazed look in her eyes?
She listens with aching heart no more, but again—The curtain must rise.

"Where is she? The scene waits!" they call, "She is late for her cue, lost her place," cry all. Yes! lost, and for love, and she heartbroken lies. No sound can awake her. "The curtain must rise, Oh, would she could sleep through eternity's span! Oh, leave her! Manager A. Judah, of the Ninth Street Theatre, Kansas City, was sued for damages for refusing to allow a negro named S. C. Younger and a negro woman to occupy seats in the parquet. The opinion holds that the Fourteenth Amendment was not violated by the action of the manager. Judge Black sums up as follows: "The colored man has and is entitled to all the rights of a citizen, but it can not be said that equality of right means identify in all respects. Here the defendant did not exclude or attempt to exclude colored persons from his theatre. He provides accommodation for them, but in so doing requires them to purchase tickets and take seats in the balcony, and this rule adopted by him accords with custom and usage prevailing in this State. Such custom has the force and effect of law until a competent legislative power shall establish some other different rule. The defendant's rule was no more

UNITED STATES CHAMPIONSHIP

Philadelphia vs. Baltimore.

Philadelphia vs. Baltimore.

The series of marches for the Eastern championship of the Inter-City League, arranged under the auspices of the Germantown Ciub, and played on its grounds at Philadelphia, commenced with a contest between representative elevens of that city and Baltimore, on June 27 and 28. The weather was unfavorable on the opening day, and as it continued so nearly all the week, no play at all being possible July i, the result was a financial failure. The Philadelphia eleven won the opening game by an inning and 130 runs. The chief credit for the victory belongs to A. M. Wood, of the Beimont Club, who not only scored 87 by brilliant batting, but bowled five wickets for 19 runs in the second inning, and also distinguished himself in fielding. His large score was marked by his usual vigorous hitting, and the only chance he gave was a difficult one at long leg. S. Welsh bowled very well in the first inning, taking eight wickets at the cost of 33 runs. Malinekrodt was the only one of the visiting team to make any stand, and he batted in fine form for 37 in the first inning. Captain Patterson gave no fewer than seven of his team a trial at bowling. Rain prevented the commencement of the game until the afternoon, and then caused a postsponement after fifty minutes play on the first day.

Boston vs. New York.

Rain interfered materially with the match between representative elevens of Boston and New York, which was commenced June 29, so that no play was possible July 1, and it was not finished until July 2. The Boston team, thanks to hard hitting by Them Pettitt, the tennis champion, and scientific batting by Fairburn for their respective totals of 91 and 74, defeated the rather weak team New York put in the field. A splendid bit of bowling by Comber in the second inning settled the question of victory in favor of Boston by 44 runs, he capturing five wickets at the cost of only 12 runs.

Philadelphia vs. Boston.

Philadelphia vs. Boston.

No time was lost after the match between Boston and New York had been finished on July 2, before commencing the deciding championship game. Captain George Wright, of the Boston team, won the toes and sent the Philadelphia team to the bat. At 4.25 P. M. Capt. Patterson of the Philadelphia team declared the innings closed for 141, with the loss of only five wickets. Boston had to get out twice before 7 o'clock, and Philadelphia determined to rush things for a chance of victory. The inning lasted until 6 P. M., when the Philadelphia objects to rush things for a chance of victory. The inning lasted until 6 P. M., when the Philadelphia sthought tuseless to attempt to dismiss the team again, and the game was declared a draw. It will be played over again, most likely at Boston.

BILLIARDS.

"Chinese Billiards," so called by old timers, but which Walter T. Chester calls "Plon-plon," and "Billy" Sexton swears is "Plunk-plunk," is quite the "go" at Maurice Daly's room, 1,292 Broadway. The game is played with a white and a red ball, and consists of a series of kiss caroms after both the cue and object balls have struck at least one cushion. Each stroke counts one, and any number of points may be agreed upon to the game. A restricted game of "Chinese billiards" is also played at Daly's. This calls for the white cue ball to strike but one cushion, the striking of more than one being considered foul, the red ball to go where it will, the restriction being only on the cue ball. Each carrom scores one. Forfeitures, penalities, etc., are the same as in regular billiards. Balk line spaces have been introduced into each corner of the table for the purpose of restricting the nursing of the balls. These lines are drawn from the face of the cu-bions opposite the last diamond sight on each of the side and end rails, the lines a triminating where they intersect on the bed of the table, thus forming a square in each corner. At least one of the balls must leave the space on the second carrom, otherwise the stroke is foul.

WILLIAM SEXTON was summoned to court last week to answer for contemponing falling to prespond within Sexton was summoned to court last week to answer for contempt in failing to respond to a summons to do fury duty. "The Sexton," with a hollow cough, informed the Court that his health was such that he could not do jury duty, and that if there were not an elevator in the court house it would have been a physical impossibility for him to get up stairs. Tris pathelic appeal struck the Judge in the right spot, and Sexton was dismissed with an "All right, sir," much to the relief of "the only Sexton." When Billy was safely outside the portals of the court room he heaved a long drawn sigh and said: "Boys, where would that $100 have come from if the Judge had stuck to his sentence? It would have been a hundred days on the Island, for I haven't seen a hundred dolars in a year."

The Ocean House, Long Branch, N. J., under new management, has been thoroughly renovated, and the billiard room entirely refitted by the Brunswick-Blake-Collender Co.

Yale's Easy Victories.

Notwithstanding the fact that rain fell in driving fashion from early morning till late in the afternoon there was an assemblage numbering probably twenty-five thousand people at the annual race between the Harvard and Yale Univerity crews on the Thames River, near New London, Ct., on Friday afternoon, July 1. Just why so many persons should gather to witness a race between comparatively fresh oarsmen, as they do every year, has shound gather to witness a race between comparatively fresh oarsmen, as they do every year, has shound be the several annual smateur regathas held by the associations East and West better rowing can be seen, and much greater value received for the output. Still, so long as there hangs the halo of "college" over the heads of the competing coarsmen, young and inexperienced though they be, we presume that such races will continue to attract an in due amount of public attention. Generally the weather is favorable on the occasion of these college contests, but on Friday last it was the reverse, as stated above. The course was four miles in length, straightaway, and the formation of the oposing crews was as follows:

The Larchmont's Fourth.

The members of the Larchmont Yacht Club had rare sport July 4, when they held their thirteenth an-nual regatta on Long Island Sound, in a refreshing northwest breeze, the wind being fair all the way, except on a short beat on the way back from Hemp-stead Harbor. It was a handleap event, and the prizes were valuable. A number of boats were pre-

They sailed over a triangular course, from a stakeboat off Port Richmond to the drawbridge, to the red buoy off Shore House, and return. The course had to be sailed over four times, making a distance of ten miles. The catboat, Doctor, lost her mast just after starting, and the open cat, J. J. Carroll, parted her halyards on the second turn round. The race was watched with interest by crowds on shore. Summary.

A. O. McC.—The player who lost the sixty-five cents is wrong in his claim. He can have no inter-est in outside stakes on the play off. The money belongs to the three winners, to divide as they may see fit.

G. D. P., Altoona.—You must follow suit, if possible, every time.

PITTSBURG.—It is a misdeal. The player did not pick up or look at his cards before discovering the surplus. If he had done so, his hand, would have been dead.

H. D. S., Plymouth.—A wins on his high.

A B, Chicago.—The not belongs to B. A lost all interest in it when he threw away his hand.

J. K. McE., Noblestown.—It was a misdeal.

A. E. S., Newark.—The deuce, tray, four, five and six of spades is a royal flush. So are the ace, king, queen jack and ten of hearts. You and your friend were both in error. Any straight flush is a royal flush.

C. I., Rochester.—Yes. A could order it up witht holding a trump. W. A. P., Washington.—The age is not transfer-wh. A. F., washington.—The age is not disinstrable.

R. B. A.—Straights have no value at all unless you specially agree to play them, at which time you should also agree upon their relative ranking value.
Mike and Jim.—The dealer dealt wrongly. A should have been served at once.
S. J. M., Brooklyn.—It is the duty of the player on the right of the dealer to cut the cards,
J. C. T., San Francisco.—He must take a trick.
J. O'H., Minneapolia.—B loses the game. A's one point counted before B's pedro.
CONSTANT BRADER.—T wins. The points score in their consecutive order.
L. C. W., Milwaukee.—C and D win on their high and low.

The Yale and Harvard College teams played an exciting game June 28, at New Haven, Ct., the former then winning by a score of 4 to 3. It was the econd of the series and the closing intercollegiate championship match of the season. Contrary to ex-pectations Yale batted Highlands freely. On the other hand Harvard was unable to secure more than five straggling singles off Bowers. Seven thousand spectators witnessed the struggle. Yale was weak-ened by the absence of Carter and Rustin, while Harvard was compelled to play a substitute catcher in the place of Mason, who was called home by the death of his father.

In the place of Mason, who was called home by the death of his father.

It required no fewer than thirteen innings before a result was reached in the championship game between the Lebanon and Allentown teams, of the Pennsylvania State League, June 28, at Allentown, Pa., the former then winning by a score of 8 to 5. Foulkrod and H. Kappell led their respective teams in batting, each making four hits. It was the first of two games for one admission. In the second game the result was reversed, the Allentowns winning by 4 to 1. Lukens pitched the entire twenty-two innings for the Allentowns, and, but for poor support in the first game, would have won both. Eleven innings were necessary before a result was reached June 29, at West New Brighton, Staten Island, in an exciting contest between the Staten Island, the next of the Allentown, the former then winning by a score of 5 to 4.

The Murray Hills defeated the Manhattans June 29, at Manhattan Field, this city, by a score of 10 to 8.

The twenty inning game between the Cincinnati and Chicago Clubs, on June 30, at Cincinnati, of which a full account is given in another column, was the longest extra inning game ever played by two major league professional teams. There have been other prolonged contests, but they have mostly occurred among the minor league clubs. On July 18, 1891, at Devil's Lake, N. D., the Fargo and Grand Forks teams contended twenty-five innings, without a run being scored, the game then being stopped in order to catch a train. On May 11, 1877, at Boston, the Harvard College and Manchester Club teams played a twenty-four inning game without a run being scored, darkness then stopping further play. No fewer than twenty-two innings were played May 16, 1891, at Tacoma, Wash, between the Tacoma and Seattle teams, of the Pacific Northwest League, the former then winning by a score of 6 to 5. On June 29, 1878, at Philadelphia, the Girard College and Yeager Club teams contended for twenty-one innings, on a gravel field and with a lively ball, before a result was reached, the latter then winning by a score of 10 to 7. Nineteen innings were necessary to decide the game between the Memphis and Alleghenys, June 2, 1877, at Allegheny, Pa., the former then winning by a score of 3 to 2. Two other nineteen inning games were stopped by darkness without a result being reached, one between the Eclipse and Akron teams, June 26, 1881, at Louisville, the score standing 2 to 2, and the other between the Actives, of Reading, and Merrits, of Camden, Aug. 22, 1882, the final figures being 3 to 3. Among the eighteen inning games that have been played, was the championship contest between the Providence, on a home run hit over the left field fence. Another eighteen game was played between the Canton and Springfield teams, of the Tri-State League, July 12, 1889, at Canton, O., the former then winning by a score of 10 to 9. The Baltimore Club was sued June 29, at Baltimore, by Pickett, for $3,500 damages. Pickett claims that he had been engaged at a salary of $3,000 per annum, that he received $500 advance money, and that since then he had been paid in monthly instalments until June 1, when he was unceremoniously released. Pickett, on June 29, attached the Washington Club's share of the gate receipts to satisfy a claim of $120, which money, he says, is owed him by the Wagners.

The Rockling team, of Trenton, visited Camden, June 28, and defeated the local team by a score of 2 to 1. Two hits made all of the runs scored in the game, as McLaughlin got a home run in the second inning, sending in a run ahead of time, and Darragh hit over the centre field fence in the ninth, and saved a shut-out. Gray pitched for Camden, and McLaughlin for the visitors. The former was safely batted three times and the latter eight times.

Manager Powers, of the New York Club, was interviewed the day before the New Yorks left here for their second Western trip and he said: "I shall play Burke at second base in the future, using Hardie Richardson as general utility man. Burke played second early in the season, when McPhere, of Cinchnati, was laid up and he did brilliant work. He is a fast fielder and a run getter. No, I shall not lay off O'Rourke, as he is playing good ball just now and deserves encouragement. I have given Jack's Sharrott his ten days' notice of release. He has been trying his arm in Buffalo with poor success. After pitching three games there and losing two Manager Shannon sent him back to me with the information that Sharrott was no longer an effective pitcher. So I had to release him. Several new men will be tried on the coming trip. As I now have entire charge of the team I propose to use extreme measures. There is some 'dead wood' to be dropped, and I think I know where to begin. I haven't decided to release Gore, and probably will not do so under the present circumstances. Harry Lyons, however, is a fixture in centre field. I have some fault to find with Russie. It is not the catching that affects him. He has not the speed and control he had a year ago. I think a few weeks' lay of without pay might do him good, and if he gives another such exhibition as he did yesterday he'll be laid off sure. I shall not stand any trifling. I did not know Ewing could not play today until a few moments before the game, when I received a despatch from him complainting of sickness. Boyle, however, covered first base in his place very well, and hit the ball hard. The New York team will be greatly mistaken."

The Plattsmouth Club played an exhibition game with the Beatrice team June 25, at Plattsmouth, Neb., instead of the scheduled game, which was forfeited in this wise: Green had been detailed to bring the balls required to the grounds, and failing in this, the game was given to Beatrice. It seems Green selzed the club's stock of balls to cover the amount owed him by the management, and refusing to give them up, they were replevined. Secretary Rohrer, of the Nebraska League, telegraphed the Beatrice Club June 25, to collect the guarsnatee and club dues of the home management, and if the amount was not forthcoming not to play the following day's game, as it is about decided to run an independent team there.

Graver, the catcher of the recently disbanded Fremont (Neb.) Club, is in the toils of the law. He accepted terms with the Hastings Club, and also advance money. Richard D. Buckley, whose portrait is above given, is one of the catchers of the St. Louis Club, of the National League and American Association. given, is one of the catchers of the St. Louis Club, of the National League and American Association. He was born Sept. 21, 1859, at Troy, N. Y., and is generally considered as one of the best catchers in the professional ranks. He commenced playing ball while he was attending school in his native city, and showed such proficiency that he was soon engaged to catch for one of the leading amateur teams of Troy. It was, nowever, while with the Haymakers, of Troy, that he first gained renown. His good work behind the bat for that team led to his first professional engagement in 1885, with the Youngstown (O). Club. His work in 1885, both behind the bat and at the bat, gave him an extended reputation, and the management soon realized that the Youngstown Club could not retain him, although it made Buckley a very liberal offer to remain another year. Buckley was sought after and offered flattering inducements by several clubs for the season of 1886, but as the terms offered by the Syracuse Club, of the International Association, were the most tempting, he finally signed with that club. He ranked fourth in the official fielding averages in 1886, and his all around work was of such a satisfactory order that he was re-engaged for the season of 1887. He caught in no fewer than fifty championship games in 1887, and had gained such a fine reputation as a catcher that he was engaged by the Indianapolis Club, of the National League. He caught in forty-eight championship games in 1888, doing more work than either of the veterans—Myers or Dailey—whom he was engaged to alternate with behind the bat, and he also played third base in twenty-one championship games. Buckley was looked upon as a steady, reliable and hard working player, and the club officials were so well pleased with his work, while under contract to them, that they at once re-engaged him for the following season at an advanced salary over what he had been receiving. During the season of 1889 Buckley did great work for the

Indianapolis Club, taking part in sixty-five championship games, officiating in fifty-two as a catcher, and thirteen of them as an in and out fielder. He and thirteen of them as an in and out fielder. He proved himself to be a clever 'catcher and a strong and safe batsman. The chief feature of his play was his swift and accurate throwing to the bases, he having few equals, and certainly no superiors in that line. When the Players' League was organized in 1890, and the New York Club was greatly depleted in 1890, and the New York Club was greatly depleted in 1890, and the New York Club was greatly depleted in 1890, and the New York Club. His all around work while with the latter club was of the highest order. The first season he played in seventy championship games, of which he officiated in no fewer than sixty two as a catcher. At the beginning of the scason of 1891, the management of the New York Club hestated about engaging Buckley, as they had the services as catchers of Ewing and Brown, whom they obtained by the consolidating of the two local rival clubs, besides Clarke and Murphy. It was not long, however, before it was seen that Ewing would be of little service to the club as a catcher, and that Buckley was far superior to Brown in that position. Buckley was, therefore, re-engaged for the season of 1891, and caught in sixty-six championship games, ranking first in the official fielding averages of the National League that year. At the close of last championship season Buckley, along with Glasscock, of the New York team, was engaged for 1892, by Von der Ahe, for his St. Louis Club, which was then a member of the American Association. He has caught in his usual fine form for the St. Louis during the present season. Buckley gained a great reputation while with the New York Club for the able manner in which he supported Rusle, who was then the switcest pitcher in the professional ranks. His fine play thus far this season with the St. Louis Browns has gained him many friends, and has placed him, as a catcher, in the front ranks of his chosen profession. proved himself to be a clever catcher and a Cincinnati vs. Washington.

The sixth game between these clubs was played July 2, at Cincinnati, rain having prevented any, play on the preceding day. The visitors knocked Chamberlain out of the box in the second inning, having then scored four runs off the same number of safe hits, which gave them a good lead. Dwyer pitched effectively during the remainder of the contest, holding the visitors down to four hits which were scattered through as many linnings. The home team batted Killen hard the last four innings and tied the score in the sixth. Three more safe hits were bunched in the eighth inning, helping the home team to the two winning runs. O'Neil made four singles and led in batting. Smith's short stopping

Chicago vs. New York.

The two games played July 4 at Chicago, concluded the series between these clubs, each then being credited with a victory. The New Yorks scored a decisive victory in the morning game. Gumbert was batted hard in four innings, when the visitors bunched fifteen safe hits, including a home run by Rusie, and scored eleven runs, nine of which were earned. Tiernan did the best batting, getting three double baggers. Rusie pitched in his former fine form, holding the Chicagos down to five safe hits, which were scattered through as many innings, and brought in only two runs. Boyle was hurt by a foul tip in the first inning, and Doyle took his place behind the bat while Richardson was substituted at short stop, Puller still being unable to play. An error by Burke was the only one of the game.

Upwards of 69,000 people were present at the twelve championship games of the National League and American Association in the morning and atternoon of the Fourth of July. The largest attendance was at Cincinnati, where upwards of 20,000 people witnessed the home team break even with the Boston team, the coming champions. The smallest attendance naturally was at Pittsburg, where about 9,000 people witnessed the home team defeat twice the Baltimore team, the tail enders in the pennant race. The Brocklyn team also beat the Louisvilles twice, while all the other teams evened up victories. -

Davis, of the Cleveland team, made seven safe hits—three doubles and four singles—in the two games with the Washington team on the Fourth of July.

The Montana State League has been incorporated, and has elected John F. Cowan, of Butte, president; A. D. Soioman, of Helena, vice president, and W. J. Stevenson, of Bozeman, secretary and treasurer. Helena, Butte, Bozeman, Great Falls, Missoula and Phillipsburgh have strong teams, and the attendance is large, baseball seeming to be in a very flourishing condition in Montana.

The afternoon game between the Riverside and Crusader teams July 4, at Philadelphia, resulted in a victory for the former by a score of 8 to 2. The latter made only one safe hit off Sticher.

It took eleven innings to decide the afternoon game between the Janesvilles and Tacony teams July 4, at Janesville, the former winning by a score of 6 to 5.

The Staten Island Athletic Club had the Schuylkill Navy Athletic Club's team, of Philadelphia, for opponents in two games July 4, at Staten Island, when each won one. The morning game resulted in a victory for the visitors by a score of 3 to 2. It required no fewer than thirteen innings to decide the afternoon game, the home team then winning by a score of 7 to 6.

The Johnstown and Altoona teams of the Pennsylvania State League, contended for twelve innings, without a result being reached, on the afternoon of July 4, at Johnstown, Pa., each team then being credited with five runs, when darkness stopped the game.

The Bellefontes had the Altoona Grays for oppon-ents July 4, at Bellefonte, Pa., the former then win-ning by a score of 9 to 0. The visitors made only one safe hit off Howell.

In the afternoon game between the Scranton and Wilkesbarre teams, of the Pennsylvania State League, played July 4, at Scranton, Pa., the home team made nine runs off seven safe hits, and defoating the Wilkesbarres, who scored eight runs off eleven safe hits.

The first series of the Western League championship season was finished June 30, with the clubs standing in the following order: Columbus, won 40, lost 18, per cent. 689; Milwaukee, won 28, lost 20, per cent. .583; Omaha, won 26, lost 24, per cent. .581; Toledo, won 23, lost 22, per cent. .511; Kansas City, won 25, lost 28, per cent. .471; Minneapolis, won 19, lost 22, per cent. .413; Indianapolis, won 12, lost 31, per cent. .472.

The Columbus team defeated the Kansas Citys.
July 4, at Kansas City, by a score of 5 to 4. Captain Campau, of Columbus, was put out of the game in the dist inning for insulting the umpire. Janizer took his place and won the game by knocking a home run with two men on bases.

It took eleven innings to decide the game between the Rutherford and Ten Eyek teams, July 4, at Rutherford, N. J., the former then winning by a score of 9 to 8.

The Senators and Metropolitans played two games July 4, at the Polo Grounds, this city, the former then winning both by the respective scores of 19 to 12, and 10 to 2.

It required twelve innings before a result was reached in the morning game between the Finshing and Jerome teams July 4, at Flushing, L. 1., the former then winning by a score of 6 to 5.

The Altoonas defeated the Johnstowns in the morning game July 3, at Altoona, Pa., by a score of 2 to 0. The winners made only two safe hits against five for its opponents. Hayes pitched for the Altoonas and Neeves for the Johnstowns.

The game between the Oritani Field Club and the Englewood Field Club, July 4, at Hackensack, N. J., resulted in a wrangle. The Englewoods had Westerveit, of the New Jersey Athletic Club, in the box, and the home team used Sharrott, relieving him with Sneden, late of the Plainfield Crescents. Hopkins was umpire, and the home team had been hitting Westervelt pretty lively. In the beginning of the ninth linning Englewood had two men out and one on second base. When McBurney was declared safe at first, Manager Davis, of the Oritanis, said he would not stand such unfair ruling. Umpire Hopkins then left the field. After a deal of wrangling the Oritanis selected another umpire, and Englewood, not responding to the umpire's call, the game was awarded to the Oritanis by 9 to 0.

Pitcher Muliane was the only player of the Cincinnati team to rebel against the cutting down of his salary; and because he refused to submit he was on July 4 given ten days' notice of his release. The other players surrendered and were cut about twenty per cent. In their salaries.

Goddard Proves to be a Better Man than the Bigger "Mission Boy."

The glove contest between Joe Goddard, the "Bar-rier Champion," of Australia, and Joe McAuliffe, the "Mission Boy," of San Francisco, Cal., took place at the rooms of the California Athletic Club, in the latter city, on Thursday evening, June 20. About three thousand persons witnessed the battle, which was hotly waged from beginning to end. They fought for a purse of $5,000, of which the loser was entitled to $750, and they were not confined to weight, that of McAuliffe being given as 219th, while Goddard's was stated to be 190th. The latter figures were probably correct. Goddard was seconded by were probably correct. Goddard was seconded by Herbert Goddard (his brother) and Henry Gallagher, while Alex. Greggains and Martin Murphy were in McAuliffe's corner. Both principals appeared to be in prime condition, although that of the Antipodean was observed to be the better. He appeared rather small and boyish in contrast with the big, apparently overgrown, Golden Gate boxer, but there was a look of determination on his face that was not to be seen on the good humored countenance of the 'Friscan.

THE FIGHT.

not to be seen on the good humored countenance of the 'Friscan.

THE FIGHT.

Round 1. McAuliffe was the first to lead, getting home lightly, and a clinch followed. Goddard quickly warmed to his work, sending home the left on the cheat and the right in close proximity to the heart. He then made one of the rushes for which he is famous, and dorve Mac to the ropes, but the latter managed to get in a straightener with the right at half arm distance, and down went Master Goddard, thus giving the first event to the American boy, who was lustily cheered.

2. After some fiddling Goddard let go his left, and the men clinched. Mac staggered him with a right hander on the ribs, and, Goddard missing a lead, Mac came in with both hands. Mac again stopped a rush so forcibly that the Australian's right leg flew up, and the spectators hissed, for they thought Goddard was trying to kick him. Hot railles near the ropes followed.

3. Goddard rushed with his left, and, after a clinch, sent Mac's head back with a left hander. His over hand smashes generally falled to reach, but he landed a good left on Joe's ear. Goddard then banged him about the head, Joe slipping to the floor again.

4. Goddard came up a little winded, but eager,

5. Goddard had a clever way of going under Mac's guard and then giving him both hands in the face. This puzzled Mac, who was forced to clinch, but he got home on a breakaway, and the Australian's left eye was soon closed and bleeding.

6. Goddard was again the aggressor. Mac was flushed but confident. Goddard pushed him about the ring and countered forcibly on his jaw. Goddard slipped to his knee from a long drive by Mc-Aulliffe as the round closed.

7. A right smash on Mac's ribs and a left hander on the Australian was followed by a desperate clinch. Goddard landed a straight one on Mac's jaw and a series of fruitless swings followed. 8. Goddard uppercut McAuliffe. Some fruitless swings and long sparring followed. Goddard pounded hard with his left on Joe's shoulders, drawing blood. Mac got in a good right drive in the face as the gong sounded.

9. The men got to close work, Goddard doing more forcible work and putting in a couple of telling righthanders on ear and wind. Goddard punched Joe in the stomach with his left and two right upper cuts followed.

10. Goddard forced Mac against the ropes, swing. ing his right on the jaw. Mac seemed flurried and the Australian rushed him. Goddard struck the San Franciscan a hard backhander on the cheek, but McAuliffe retailated hard in the face.

11. Goddard forced McAuliffe from corner to corner, making desperate drives for his head. Mac's temper was aroused, and he punched the Austrlian hard on the chest. Goddard paid most attention to the body and head, and seemed trying for a knockout. McAuliffe pursued his usual slow method of long range drives after clinching.

12. Goddard came up evidently bent on finishing the San Franciscan, and banged him about the ring with both hands. McAuliffe made use of his left, and stopped several lefts with Jabs on the mouth. Goddard crowded him to the ropes, and Mac resorted to clinching to save himself.

13. Goddard banged Mac around the ring. Mac upper cut once, but he had apparently lost all idea of guarding himself or making an aggressive fight.

14. Mac made a quick lead, but Goddard countered with a left on the jaw and staggered him. Mac clinched him about the neck and Goddard smashed him in the ribs. The Australian banged Joe from corner to post, sending him through the ropes. Mac was down several minutes and rose with his nose bleeding. Goddard drew blood from Mac's mouth.

nose bleeding. Goddard drew blood from Mac's mouth.

15. Mac was groggy, Goddard sent him to his knees with a right hander and smashed him about the head with both hands as he rose. Near the opposite corner Goddard dropped him to his knees with his right. McAultife remained on his hands and knees, with his head bent down, for nine seconds, and when he rose helplessly, Goddard, who had been to his corner, rushed on him, and after a couple of blows sent him down near the ropes, where he was counted out. Goddard was borne to his chair by his seconds amid the cheers of the spectators.

JOHN L. SULLIVAN was to have taken up his quarters at the spot selected for him by his backer, charley Johnston, on the shore of Shinnecock Bay, Long Island, on Tuesday afternoon, July 5, the day THE CLIPPER was put to press. During the latter part of the past week he has been taking exercise at the Brooklyn Handball Court, under the experienced eye of his mentor, Phil Casey, the handball champion, who will have the supervision of his training. That is a sufficient guarantee that the big Bostonian wil enter the ring in prime condition at New Orleans next September. Certainly he could not be in better hands.

THE CODEY Island Athletic Club have succeeded.

The Coney Island Athletic Club have succeeded in arranging a match between Alex. Greggains, of San Francisco, Cal., and Ed. Benny, who hails from Boston, Mass., who are to fight at the headquarters of that organization by the seashore, during the month of August. The purse is $2,500, and each principal is supposed to stake $1,000 in addition.

JOHNNY GRIPFIN, of Braintree, Mass, and Jimmy Lynch, of this city, have been matched to fight will gloves before the Coney Island Athletic Club, for a purse of $2,500. of which the loser is to receive $300 The fight is to take place sometime in September, and the weight limit is 122th.

Death of Meagher.

John Meagher, the professional champion walker, fled at his home, 124 Jackson Street, Lawrence Mass., on Saturday evening, July 2, after a linger ing illness of six months, from bronchial trouble. He was born at London, Eng., July 26, 1859, of Irish parents, came to this country at the age of thirteen years, and learned the trade of loom fixer. His first contest on the cinder track took place when he was twenty years old, and he took part in many races that brought national renown. In 1882 he won the twenty-five mile championship of America, and made a world's record for one hour's walking. On May 30, 1885, he met William Raby, then England's champion, in a match at Lawrence, when the latter was disqualified. Meagher did not afterwards figure as a principal in contests on the track, but followed the business of conductor on an ommibus line in Philadelphia. He was respected by all who knew him as a gentleman athlete, and his early demise will cause sincere regret among all his friends. He leaves a wife and son, the latter six years old; also four brothers. The funeral occurred on July 4. parents, came to this country at the age of thirteen

A FOOTBALL MATCH was contested by teams representing respectively the Tyrone and Liberty Clubs, the former of Newark, N.J., and the latter of Staten Island, at Elm Park, S.I., on the afternoon of July 3, the Tyrones winning by a score of four goals and twelve points to one goal and three points.

The National Regatta.

This event, the greatest annual fixture on the amateur list, will take place this year on Saratoga Lake on Tuesday and Wednesday, July 26, 27. This will be the first year since the formation of the association that the races will have been rowed with a turn. At a meeting of the Executive Committee, held in this city Jan. 16 last, it was decided that all races, with the exception of the eight oared event, should be one mile and a half with one turn, the eight oared race to be the same distance, straightaway. This is a wise change, and one that will please the spectators, who will thus be afforded an oppor-tunity to witness the struggle between the oarsmen from beginning to end. The races will be as follow, and are open to all amateurs:
Junior single scull shells, senior single scull shells, double scull shells, pair oared shells, junior four oared shells, senior four oared shells, junior four oared shells, with coxswains. The races will be rowed in such order and on such days as may be hereafter arranged by the Regatta Committee.
The challenge cups and plate of the National Association will be given to the winners of the senior singles, doubles, pairs and fours; individual gold medals in each event to every winning oarsman or sculler, and a silk banner to his club. Entries by individuals or crews will not be accepted, but must be officially signed by the club. To be eligible to participation a club must have been duly organized at least three months prior to the dates of holding this regatta. Contestants must have been members of the club from which they propose to enter for three months preceding the date of this regatta, and have been entered in no race from any other club during that time.

To insure a race two or more entries are required as follow, and are open to all amateurs:

To insure a race two or more entries are required in each class, and should withdrawal, after entries are closed, reduce the number to one boat, the crew are closed, reduce the number to one boat, inc crew or sculler therein must row over the course to be entitled to the prize. In entering for eight oars, a list of twive harmers; for pour oars, a list of six names; for pair oars and double sculls, a list of four names each shall be sent to the secretary, and from these names the actual crew must be selected. In single sculls substitutes will not be allowed. Rule 22 gives the Regatta Committee power to reject any entry.

Entrance fees—Single sculls, $5; pair oars, $10; double sculls, $10; four oars, $15; eight oars, $20. The entrance fee must in every instance accompany the original entry. Send money order or check. Regular forms for entry are furnished by the secretary. Entries close July 12; entries mailed on July 12, bearing that post mark, will be received.

The Trunk Line Commission has ordered that contestants shall be carried at half fare, with racing boats free, at the owners' risk. A supplementary circular will soon be issued containing full details as to transportation. Provision will be made for the conveyance of boats from the train to the boat house, and, to insure the services of the committee and safe carriage of the boats, crews are requested to give the Charlana of the committee and safe carriage of the Recentity Committee forty. or sculler therein must row over the

and, to insure the services of the committee and safe carriage of the boats, crews are requested to give the Chairman of the Reception Committee forty-eight hours' notice of their expected arrival. Be careful to state by what road they will come, and on what train. The regatta is held under the auspices of the Saratoga Athletic Association, J. W. Arkell, president; J. Arthur Seavy, secretary and treasurer. Reception committee—J. Arthur Seavey, chairman; William H. Manning, George M. Crane. Committee on Board and Quarters will give prompt attention to all applications addressed to the secretary of the Saratoga Athletic Association. An electric railway has been constructed connecting Saratoga Springs with the Lake, and excellent accommodations can be obtained at reasonable rates, either near the Lake or in the village, as crews may prefer.

Yachting at Gravesend.

The entries were limited to club members in the annual regatta of the Bensonhurst Yacht Club, which was sailed July 2, in Gravesend Bay, N. Y. off the club house. They had a good southwes breeze and salled over a triangular course of six-teen miles. The entries were as follow: Class 3, sloops—Seminole, Gypsy and Effle. Class B, cat-bons—Caprice, Nettie, Roma, Isabel, B. Q., Edda D. and Ariel. The result was as follows:

The New Rochelles.

A more favorable day for yacht racing could scarcely be found than the New Rochelle Yacht Club had July 2, when they held their seventh annual regatta, as a spanking southerly breeze favored the racing yachts all day. The steamer Cepheus was chartered to carry the guests over the course, which were composed largely of pretty girls. Thirty-nine yacets started and thirty-seven finished. The start was made from our the clubhouse, which is delightfully located on Echo Island, and all the boats got away in great shape, the signal being given at noon, and they crossed the line in this order: Anaconda, Nellie, Penguin, Gulnare, Phantom, Addie L. D., Sasqua, Lena, Wacondah, Narrioch, Nellie (cat), Kot, Saona, Phyllis, Genevieve, Spindritt, Twitight, Tattler, Marguerite, Willada, Archer, Edna, Florence, Caprice, Isnit, Sadie, Ida K., Myrtle, Kittee, Truant, Adelaide, Mella, Ges So, Presto, Duster, Phoebe R., Pavonia, Petrel and Sirene.

The course for yachts over thirty feet was to Captain's Island, passing around Execution Light and a stakeboat off Matinicock Point on the way. The small boats turned back at Matinicock. They crossed the line on the port tack, and made two or three short tacks to reach the lighthouse, then with the wind over the starboard quarter, they laid their course for Matinicock Point. The Anaconda set her balloon jib and did very well.

At Matinicock the Anaconda, J. G. Prague's sloop, led the fleet. She gibed round the stakeboat at 1.07:00, Penguin turned at 1.09:00, Glinare 1.09:55, Sasqua 1.19:30, Genevieve 1.20:00, Edna 1.23:30, Roi 1.23:13, Tattler, 1.17:13, Phantom 1.19:00, Saona 1.19:30, Genevieve 1.20:00, Edna 1.23:30, Roi 1.23:14, Wacondah and Nellie (201) 1.24:40, Kittle 1.20:10, Sirene 1.20:30, Addie L. D. 1.26:50, Myrile 1.27:30, Twilight 1.30:40.

The big boats set their spinnakers to port on the run to Captain's Island, and on this leg Guinare took second place. Rounding the Matinicock stake Wacondah and Nellie fouled each other, but fortunately no damage was done. Tattle led the small boats and won back home in fine style finishing first. The times taken at Captain's Island were as follow: Anaconda 1.46:40, Guinara I.60:40. ored the racing yachts all day. The steamer Cepheus was chartered to carry the guests over the Seawanhaka Corinthians.

It was a quarter to one o'clock when the preparitory signal was given for the twenty-second annual itory signal was given for the twenty-second annual race of the Seawanhaka Corinthian Yacht Cluts sailed July 2, and five minntes later the signal was given for the schooners to start. The Montauk, which had no competitor, was the first to cross the line, at 12h. 52m. 69s., followed by the Iroquois, Azalea, Marinda, Pecriess and Vista. Then came the sloops, followed by smaller yachts. The Wasp created quite a sensation by going over the full thirty-four mile course in 3h. 48m. 18s., outsaling the schooners and leading the Iroquois 14m. 25s. at the finish. The El Chico beat the Fixy by over five minutes. The steamer Myndert Starin, conveying the guests of the club, followed the yachts over the course, and all hands enjoyed the race most thoroughly.

Sailing on Jamaica Bay.

The annual regatta of the Canarsie Yacht Club, which was sailed over a ten mile course in Jamaica Bay, July 2, was watched with great interest by Bay, July 2, was watched with great interest by their guests from the balconies of the club house. They had a good, stiff breeze from the southwest, and they fairly flew over the course, which was from a stakeboat off the club house at Sands Point, east to Rum Point, west to the break waters off Canarsie, and northeast to the starting point. They had to go over the course three times. Interest centred on the Selfish, Janet and Siren, and from start to finish it was an exciting race between these three. They crossed the finish line in the order named. The time allowance gave the race to the Siren, with the Selfish second. The Adeline won in the first class, the So So in the third and the Gracie L, in the fourth. The Selfish won the club pennant. Summary:

ALL THE COMFORTS OF A HOME.

A HVMLL.

By Walter P. Keen The great comic success of the year. Every verse a comic story told to catchy music. Here is the chorus of first verse:
"All the Comforts of a Home,
Such a happy little Home,
When you're nursing twins, then the fun begins,
Up and down the floor you have to roam;
Mother in law will soon appear,
Comes for a moa'rh and stops a year,
When her temper's bot, bet your life you've got
All the Comforts of a Home
The complete song, words and music, will be sent to properly the complete song, words and music, will be sent to FINE CASE CAN EVER FILL YOUR PLACE," are two other superb songs by the same composer, and will be mailed to professionals for 10c. each.

THE WORLD KNOWS NOT THEIR EQUAL. A WELL DESERVED COMPLIMENT.—Prof. Kellar, the world renowned magician, and his wife, attended the concert given at Central Opers House, June 10. for the benefit of the flood sufferers in the oil country. As Mr. A H. Knoil and Miss Marie McKelll, who took part in the concert, were about to leave the theatre, they were greated by Mr. Kellar, who said, in the presence of a reporter: "Allow me to congravitate you both for your excellent playing. This is the first opportunity I have had to hear you play, and I was charmed." He also added: "I have been all over the world, and have heard all the great cornettivits, including Levy, and had Walter Rumerson with my company one season—but I think your playing is superior to all others."—ERIE. THE MONMOUTH REVIVAL.

Monmouth Park was thrown open to the public July 4 for the first time since the Summer of 1890, and a large and enthusiastic crowd witnessed the races, but, to their grievance, it was not a good day for favorites. There were fully twenty thousand people present, and, as the majority of them do con-siderable betting, the bookmakers reaped a rich harvest. The new management have made many harvest. The new management have made many improvements, which has given the track a bright, cheerful appearance. Seventy-four bookmakers did business, despite the threats of the Law and Order Society of Monmouth County. Nearly all of the constables of the county have been engaged to do police duty on the track, and they therefore feel very kindly toward the association. The track was dead and moist underneath from the heavy rain of Sunday, although it had dried out admirably on top. Its condition caused many scratches, the heaviest field having but seven starters. Of the seventeen coits carded for the Independence Stakes, for two year olds, over the three-quarters of a mile straightaway course, only seven started. Experiment was the favorite, with Spartan second choice, but St. Michael won, with Comanche second, both at long odds. There were five starters in the first division of the Fourth of July Handicap. Montana was the favorite, with Tournament second choice, but the latter proved the victor. The fifteen entries for the second division dwindled down to five, with Kildeer the favorite, but the race was won by Sir Matchew. There were but two horses entered for the Ocean Stakes, a sweepstakes, at a distance of a mile and an eighth, over the outer circular course. Longstreet was such a favorite over Entre that the betting men had to put up fifteen dollars on him to win one, while odds of 12 to 1 were laid against Entre. Summary:

A sweepstakes for three year olds and upward, $20 each, $1,000 added, $200 to second, $100 to third, penalties and allowances three quarters of a mile.

New Double Team Record.—The kite shaped track at Kirkwood, Del., was opened July 4. It is estimated that there were 12,000 persons on the grounds. The event of the day was the successful effort of Belle Hamlin and Globe to break their record, made on the track at Independence, Is. The time made was 2:12, one second better than the Independence time. The three judges, Joseph W. Wenderoth, president of the Philadelphia Tattersalls, and W. F. Williams and J. W. Johnson, of Plainfield, N. J., recorded the time as 2:12 flat.

amateur championship of England was held at the Herne Hill Grounds, London, on Saturday afternoon, June 18, under the management of the National 'Oyclists' Union. The weather was good at the start, but afterwards rain fell, making the path somewhat slower than at the commencement. The sport was only fairly good, owing to the fact that, as usual at championship meetings, waiting tactics prevailed, causing the events to become tiresome. Summary:

Columbia Colt Races.

The Columbia colt bicycle races were held at Charter Oak Park, Hartford, Ct., July 4. About Zimmerman Again a Winner.

A cablegram dated London, England, Eng., July 3, reads as follow: "An immense throng of people attended the sports of the Liverpool police today. Arthur A. Zimmerman, the American champion bicyclist, who has won much renown in England, made his appearance on the grounds, and the Mayor of Liverpool offered a silver cup, worth £30, for a bicycle race of two miles. The rules of the union do not allow a prize of over ten guineas for a single event, but this problem was solved to the satisfaction of the Mayor and Zimmerman by repeating the race. The first time there was a large number of contestants in the field, but the race really lay between Zimmerman, of Wolverhampton, and Glazebrook, of Ashton. In the first lap the American shot ahead and won by 11yds. in 5m. 46½s. In the second race Zimmerman forged to the front in the fourth lap, beating Glazebrook by 2yds., Sharpe being third, Time, 5m. 58½s. The Mayor then presented the trophy to Zimmerman, while the crowd gave hearty cheers in honor of the A cablegram dated London, England, Eng., July while the crowd gave hearty cheers in honor of the American champion.

A NEW PLAY.

"The Robber of the Rhine."

This three act comic opera, the music by Charles Puerner (composer of "The Pyramids"), and the Puerner (composer of "The Pyramids"), and the libretto by Maurice H. Barrymore, was sung for the first time on any stage at H. C. Miner's New Fifth Avenue Theatre, this city, May 23, dedicating that rebuilt structure. The plot is rather slight, and not a 'all novel or unconventional, resembling at times the story of "Robert Macaire" and its musical prototype, "Erminie." The Robber of the Rhine is a baudsome bandit, with the usual picturesquely ragged retinue of thieves, dwelling in caves and fastnesses along the Rhine. He is secretly inlove with, and is loved by, the daughter of a high official in a town near by, and frequently goes to woo her. One day his band capture a traveling party of German aristocrats, and despoil them of their fine clothes, money and jewelry. Attiring themselves in the stolen costumes, the robber chief and his fellows proceed in state along the journey laid out for their prisoners. The robbers represent themselves as the real noblemen, and pretend that their captives are the bandits, whom they have surprised. Out of this complication grow the main incidents. In the end everything turns out blissfully.
